Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 16-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over WO'123. WO'123 teaches that placement of "ripples" or perturbations (page 8 lines 5-18 for example) in the surface of a stopper rod and/or nozzle at locations where clogging through precipitation on the refractory component would disadvantageously occur (pages 9 and 10 for example) where there are advantageously a plurality of ripples (page 9, lines 9-18 for example) in order to reduce clogging through precipitation on the surface of a refractory component was known in the art at the time the invention was made, thereby showing all aspects of the above claims except the specific placement of the ripples at any specific location or configuration within the areas broadly disclosed by WO'123 as suitable for placement of the ripples or perturbations. However since the ripples or perturbations of WO'123 operate in substantially the same manner (disruption of laminar flow of the molten metal in the boundary layer) with substantially the same results (reduced precipitation on the refractory components, leading to reduced clogging), motivation to employ any of the disclosed equally useful configurations or arrangements broadly allowed by the disclosure of WO'123 would have been a modification obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made since it has been well settled that where the prior art discloses a broad range of acceptable operating conditions, motivation to select a more narrow, but equally useful range within the broader range disclosed by the applied prior art would have been a modification obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made. See MPEP 2144.05.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Richaud (the US patent application publication of WO'123) is also cited.
